An Interdisciplinary Major in Women's Studies

WOMEN'S STUDIES

The Women's Studies program coordinates teaching, research, and scholarship in the field of Women's Studies. This is a unique academic program that incorporates praxis-practice that is informed by theory and gendered analyses. Women's Studies is a site of social change/activism as much as theory. It is a discipline in its own right that also draws from many other fields of study.

The unique defining objective in a Women's Studies major is that it focuses on students' ability to perform a thorough Gendered Analysis. A Gendered Analysis-which focuses on the intersection of complexities such as sex/gender, ethnicity, social class, sexual identity, ability, religion, and age-is the umbrella under which all specific goals for majors occur. The objectives can be described by two key components, Knowledge (which includes history and theory) and Application (which includes articulation, activism, and ethics).

Women's Studies majors will become informed, thoughtful, empowered agents of change. In addition, they will be well prepared to pursue graduate work in Women's Studies and other fields. Most Women's Studies graduates pursue careers in health, social and human services, education, law, government, and public policy.
